

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

P R E F A C E.

SINCE this Annual was first undertaken, thirty-eight years have passed away, thirteen administrations have been summoned to the councils of the Sovereign, ten parliaments have been elected, and nine have been dissolved. Within this period imitators and plagiarists without number have too often sought to intercept the just rewards of an original design, and to sustain a precarious existence by borrowing almost every feature of typography, language, and decoration. But the turn of mind which dictated spoliation was naturally incapable of impartiality; and those who appropriated without hesitation the outward features of a successful plan, contributed at least one item to their compilations—the taint of political bias. It is not surprising therefore that this volume, which, during every ministerial vicissitude since the passing of the first Reform Bill, has aimed at avoiding party tendencies, should have succeeded in acquiring public support; and that it should once more appeal to a just and generous body of readers with the confidence of an enlarged experience and the sanguine energy of a renewed life.

To describe in any preface or introduction the kind of information which may be found in these pages, is now fortunately a needless task; every reader who is not already well acquainted with its purposes and characteristics, may be safely referred to the Table of Contents for the shortest exposition of its object, and the strongest evidence of its utility.

PART II.

EXPLANATION OF PARLIAMENTARY TERMS AND PROCEEDINGS.

ADJOURNMENT.—See Interruption of the Sittings of Parliament.

AMENDMENT.—See Order.

AVOIDANCE OF A DECISION.—When a motion has been made upon which the House happens to be unwilling to come to a vote, there are formal modes of avoiding a decision, amongst which are moving “that the orders of the day be now read,” or moving “the previous question.” The former means, that the House should—casting aside and taking no further notice of the matter then before it—proceed to the other business appointed for that day; the latter, that a vote be previously taken as to the expediency of coming to any decision on the question raised. If “the previous question” of expediency be negatived, the motion to which it referred is only gotten rid of for the time, whereas a direct negative to the motion itself would be a proscription of it for the remainder of the Session, as well as a denial of its principle. With respect to a Bill, moving that it “be read this day six months,” or “this day three months,” is a mode of throwing it out without coming to an express declaration against the principle of the measure.

BILLS (PRIVATE).—These are chiefly introduced to enable private individuals, associated together, to undertake railways or other works of public utility at their own risk, and, in a degree, for their own benefit; but there are other private bills, as those of naturalization, change of name, divorce, or for perfecting titles to estates, &c. The minimum fees paid by the promoters of a private bill are fixed by the Standing Orders of the House at 15*l.* for each stage of the bill, to be increased if the money to be raised or expended under the authority of the bill amounts to 100,000*l.*;

if the sum exceeds a million, the fees are to be quadrupled. The fees on a bill for the naturalization of a foreigner are limited to 100*l*. The class of professional gentlemen who act as solicitors in promoting private bills, are called Parliamentary Agents.

BILLS (PUBLIC).—A bill is the draft or skeleton of a statute. Any bill which the Lords can originate may be introduced and laid on the table by any individual peer without the previous permission of the House; but in the Commons no bill can be brought in unless a motion for leave be previously agreed to. No bill relating to religion and no bill relating to trade may be brought into the House until the proposition has first been considered and agreed to in a Committee of the whole House. Permission having been granted, three or four members are appointed to prepare the bill. It is then brought in and read a first time without amendment or debate, and a day appointed for the second reading, previously to which it is printed and a copy furnished to every member. The bill, after the second reading, is referred to a Committee of the whole House, when its details are considered, as its principles were upon each of its several readings. Members are at liberty to discuss its principle on any of its stages, but no one is considered to have declared decisively in favour of its principle unless he support by his vote its second reading. In Committee the bill is debated clause by clause, the blanks left for names, dates, nature and amount of penalties &c. are filled up, and sometimes the bill entirely new-modelled. The blanks, as they are called, which are usually filled up in italics, are agreed to without a question being put, unless a member should propose to alter them. The next proceeding is, that the Chairman of the Committee should make a report to the House of the changes that the bill has undergone, which he does by stating to the Speaker "that Committee had gone through the bill" and either "made an amendment thereunto" or "had directed him to report the same without amendment." The report of the Committee is a formal proceeding. If no amendments have been made the bill is ordered to be read a third time, but if the Committee have altered it, the bill, as amended, is ordered to be taken into consideration on a future day. At this stage it is customary to reprint the bill if the amendments are considerable. The entire when amended, is open to revision, and no restraint is placed upon the amendments that may then be made, or on the addition of new clauses. On the third reading the judgment of the House is expressed upon the entire bill as it finally stands, but only verbal amendments can be made at this stage. The last question but one is, that the "bill do pass;" after this nothing remains except to determine its title, which used to be a general one for all the acts passed in the Session, but in modern times distinct titles are used for each statute. During the progress of a bill the House may divide on the following questions: 1st, on the second reading; 2nd, that it be committed; 3rd, that the bill as amended be considered; 4th, that the bill be re-committed; 5th, that it be read a third time; 6th, that it do pass; 7th, the title of the bill. These are quite exclusive of any divisions in Committee, or any amendments, or of any clauses added to or expunged from the measure in or out of the Committee. Alterations cannot be made in a bill until after its principle has been disposed of on the second reading. Immediately after the passing of a bill, the Clerk of the House takes it to the bar of their Lordships' House, desiring their concurrence, where it passes through the same forms as in the Commons. If the bill be rejected, no further proceedings ensue. When the Lords agree with the Commons in the principle of the measure, but differ on matters of detail, a conference usually follows between members deputed from each House, who generally succeed in adjusting the difference; but if both Houses remain inflexible, the bill is dropped. The same proceedings are adopted mutatis mutandis when the bill originates in the Upper House. Acts of amnesty are read once only in each House. The bill having thus passed both Houses, remains with the Lords, except in the case of a bill of supply, which is sent back to the Commons, to be by them presented at the bar of the Lords to the Sovereign or the royal Commissioners. The assent of the Crown is the final proceeding which converts a bill into an Act of Parliament. (See "Royal Assent.")

BUDGET (THE).—The Chancellor of the Exchequer makes one general statement every year to the House of Commons, which is intended to present a comprehensive view of the financial condition of the country. Sometimes there are preliminary, or supplemental, or occasional speeches; but the great general statement of the year has, for a long time past, been quaintly called "the Budget," from the French bougette, by a common figure of speech, putting the name of that which incloses, to signify the thing contained. The annual speech known by that appellation embraces a review of the income and expenditure of the last year, as compared with those of preceding years; remarks upon the financial prospects of the country; an exposition of the intended repeal, modifications, or imposition of taxes during the session; and a detail of the public expenditure during the current period, with its grounds of justification.

CABINET.—The government of a state or community is understood to signify the exercise of supreme authority, and includes the executive, the legislative, and the judicial powers; but in popular acceptation it means only the first of these, the higher and more immediate functions of which are exercised by the Cabinet, a select body in whom, for the time being the whole of the royal authority is vested. Its members all belong to the Privy Council, but do not include a tithe of that body. The Cabinet is composed of the more eminent portion of the Administration, but it does not constitute more than a fourth part of those whom a change of ministry deprives of office, the persons included in that council being rarely less than ten or more than fifteen. The Cabinet being more immediately responsible for the conduct of public affairs, their deliberations are always considered confidential, and kept secret even from their colleagues who are less exalted in office. The distinguished individual who fills the situation of First Lord of the Treasury, and combined with it sometimes that of Chancellor of the Exchequer, is the chief of the ministry, and therefore of the Cabinet: he is usually styled, the "Premier," or "Prime Minister," but more properly designated as "the head of her Majesty's government." It is at his immediate recommendation that his colleagues are appointed, and, with hardly an exception, he dispenses the patronage of the Crown. Every Cabinet includes the following high officers:—The First Lord of the Treasury, the Lord Chancellor, the Lord President of the Council, the Lord Privy Seal, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, and the Secretaries of State. Several other ministerial functionaries, however, have seats in the cabinet; never less than three, and rarely so many as seven or eight of this latter class, are called to that station. Their offices are as follow:—Commissioner of Works and Buildings, Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, First Lord of the Admiralty, President of the Board of Trade, Master of the Mint, Judge Advocate-General, Postmaster-General, Chief Secretary for Ireland, President of Poor Law Board, Chief Justice of the Queen's Bench.* The selection usually falls upon those amongst the latter mentioned functionaries, whose rank, talents, reputation, and political weight, render them the most useful auxiliaries, or whose services, while in opposition, may have created the strongest claims to the honours of the Cabinet. It has occasionally happened that a statesman possessing high character and influence accepts a seat in the Cabinet without undertaking the labours and responsibility of any particular office. Although this select council has now been regarded during several generations as an essential part of our polity, yet it still continues to be unknown to the law. The names of the noblemen and gentlemen who compose it are never officially announced to the public. No record is kept of its resolutions or meetings, nor has its existence ever been recognised by any act of parliament. (See Crown, Executive.)

* The first Lord Ellenborough was the last Chief Justice who held a seat in the Cabinet; having withdrawn from the Administration, he afterwards expressed his disapprobation of the practice.

CHAIRMAN OF COMMITTEE OF WAYS AND MEANS.—This officer of the House of Commons—always a member—is elected by the House, in Committee of Supply, on the assembling of every new Parliament. It is his duty to preside whenever the House is in Committee whether on bills or any other Committee of the whole House; he sits, not in the Speaker's chair, but at the table in the seat of the Clerk of the House. On divisions, when the numbers happen to be equal, he gives the casting voice, but in committees he never otherwise votes. In August 1853 it was, by a resolution of the House, decided that, during the unavoidable absence of the Speaker, this officer should preside in his stead, being only so appointed, however, from day to day.

CHAIRMAN OF COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE HOUSE.—In the Lords, the Chairman of Committees of the whole House is elected by the House every Session; he usually holds in addition the office of Deputy Speaker of the House of Lords.

CHILTERN HUNDREDS.—An acceptance of "the Chiltern Hundreds" is a form which has now no other meaning than that the Member accepting resigns his seat. No office, having emolument attached, can be conferred by the Crown on a Member of the House of Commons without his thereby vacating his seat, and it is only by obtaining office that a Member can rid himself of the duties which any body of constituents may impose even without his consent; the Crown, therefore, for the convenience of the House at large, is always ready to confer on any Member "the Stewardship of her Majesty's Chiltern Hundreds, the Stewardship of the Manor of Poynings, of East Hendred and Northstead, or the Escheatorship of Munster;" sinecures which he continues to hold till some other Member solicits a similar accommodation. Many offices, however, though in reality government appointments, are not directly conferred by the Crown, but by the heads of the several departments; of this number are certain of the British Ministers accredited to Foreign Courts, and the Under Secretaries of State. The acceptance of such offices does not necessarily deprive a member of his seat in the House of Commons. By the Reform Act of 1867 it was enacted that members already in office accepting other offices should not thereby vacate their seats.

CLERK OF THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.—"The Clerk of the Commons House of Parliament" holds an office of great trust and importance. He, with two assistants, sits at the upper end of the table. The Crown appoints him by letters patent, and, when necessary, he can appoint a deputy. The appointment of the other clerks in the service of the House is vested in him. It is his duty to make minutes, not of the arguments held in the House, but of the decisions at which it arrives—in other words to record its votes, resolutions, addresses, orders, reports, divisions, and all other proceedings in which it may be engaged; to see that they are correctly printed and distributed to the members, to read aloud all such documents as the House may order to be read, to perform the duty (without taking the chair) of president or moderator during the choice of a Speaker, putting a question and directing a division in the same manner as a chairman would.

COMMITTALS.—In common with courts of law and equity, the Houses of Parliament can punish all contempts of their authority or disobedience of their mandates. Each House is armed with power to repress any aggression committed upon their rights, or any interference with their privileges; but in the case of the Commons the operation of this power is limited to the session of Parliament, committals by that House being invalidated by a prorogation. Either House can delegate to a Committee the power of sending for papers and records, and of enforcing the attendance of necessary witnesses.

COMMITTEES—Are, first, those of the whole House, which may be to consider of certain Resolutions, as to the nature of which considerable latitude prevails; or the House resolves itself into such Committee to consider the details of a Bill, the principle of which may be discussed at any or all of its other stages; or there may be Committees for financial purposes as those of "Supply," or "Ways and Means" (which see). Secondly, There are Select Committees chosen for some specific purpose—the numbers composing such bodies seldom exceed twenty or thirty members; occasionally these are declared Committees of Secrecy. Thirdly, Committees on private Bills (which see). Until the year 1868 there were also Election Committees appointed to try the merits of controverted Elections—these were chosen by the General Committee of Elections. Since then, however, these inquiries take place before a Judge of the Court of Common Pleas in the locality of the election, and at the conclusion of each trial the Judge reports to the Speaker his judgment in each case. When the whole House is in Committee, the Speaker vacates the Chair, the Mace is placed under the table; and the Chairman of Ways and Means, or in his absence a Member of the House, is called on to preside, who sits in the seat of the Clerk of the House. For Committees of Supply, and Ways and Means, and Bills, there is a Chairman, who receives a salary. (See Chairman of Ways and Means.)

CONFERENCE.—This is a species of negotiation between the two Houses of Parliament, conducted by managers appointed on both sides, for the purpose of producing concurrence, in cases where mutual consent is necessary; or for the purpose of reconciling differences which may have arisen. If the conference be upon the subject of a bill depending between the two Houses, it must be demanded by that House which, at the time of asking the conference, is in possession of the bill. It is the sole privilege of the Lords to name the time and place for holding a conference, no matter by which House it may have been demanded. Reasons in writing for the course resolved to be taken, are furnished to the managers on both sides, in which case it is simply called "a conference." Should this proceeding fail, a "free conference" may be held, which gives an opportunity for the managers to attempt by personal persuasion to effect that agreement between the Houses which the written reasons failed in producing. A free conference can only be demanded after two conferences have been holden without effect. After one free conference, none other but free conferences can be held touching the same subject. In May, 1861, it was agreed both by Lords and Commons, that reasons respecting differences of opinion on any bill, or other proceeding, might be communicated to either House by message from the other, and that no conference need take place unless specially requested. At all conferences, the managers on the part of the Upper House are seated and wear their hats; those for the Commons stand uncovered. The Speaker quits the chair of the House during the absence of managers attending a conference. Only one "free conference" has been held during the last 120 years.

CROWN.—The prerogatives and functions of the Crown may be summed up under the following heads:—To give or refuse to bills the "Royal Assent" (which see); to cause the due administration and execution of the laws; to act on behalf of the whole community in its intercourse with Foreign States, and as a part of that, to declare war or conclude peace; to direct the naval and military force of the country; to administer the public revenue; to prorogue or dissolve Parliament; to create peers; and to coin money. The monarch is the supreme governor of the Church; the source of justice and of mercy, of all offices, honours, emoluments, and chartered rights. But in every case the sovereign acts by ministers who are amenable to Parliament, and the choice of those ministers is the only prerogative which can be constitutionally exercised without responsible advisers; but even over this, there is much Parliamentary control, for the royal favour can have no practical effect, unless it rest upon men whose characters and measures prove generally acceptable to both Houses. (See Cabinet.)

DISSOLUTION.—See Interruption of the sittings of Parliament.

ESTATE OF PARLIAMENT.—Strictly speaking, the three "Estates of the Realm" consist of, 1st, the Lords Spiritual; 2nd, the Lords Temporal; 3rd, the Commons. Parliament fully assembled consists of the King, with the two estates of the peerage, sitting in one House, and the Commonalty by their representatives standing below the bar. But instead of the three estates of the realm, we are accustomed to speak of the three branches of the legislature. Neither of the Houses ever deliberates in the presence of the Sovereign, nor will either of them permit any allusion in debate to his sentiments. The King, Lords, and Commons, in their united character, exercise none but the legislative functions. Taken together, they are the Parliament, and there can be no act of Parliament in which they do not concur. (See Royal Assent.) In addition to this legislative character, common to the three, each has separate functions peculiar to itself. In the Sovereign resides the whole executive authority. The House of Lords exercises judicial authority as a court of dernier resort, and as a tribunal to which great officers of state, impeached by the other House, are amenable.

EXECUTIVE.—The following comprise the principal departments of the executive government:—The Treasury, the Admiralty, the War Office, the Ordnance, the Home Office, the India Office, the Colonial Office, the Board of Trade, the Foreign Office, the Board of Works and Public Buildings, the Mint, the Office of the Privy Seal, the Office of the Duchy of Lancaster, and the Irish Office. Those offices which are principally or exclusively occupied with the collection of the public revenue are the Customs, the Excise, the Stamps, the Post Office, the Office of Assessed Taxes, the Crown Lands, &c. The public functionaries to whom the conduct in chief of these several departments is entrusted, together with the great officers of the royal household, constitute what is termed the Ministry or Administration.* Its members vary according to circumstances, rarely exceeding fifty or sixty persons. They hold their offices, not like the judges, quamdiu bene se gesserint, but durante bene placito—a tenure which was anciently universal, and still prevails in the great majority of offices. The Administration usually resign when they lose the confidence of either House of Parliament; or they may be dismissed by the Sovereign, and it is competent for either House to present an address to the throne, praying their dismissal. The members of a government are understood to concur in principles of legislation and policy, and co-operate in Parliament upon all matters not specifically agreed on as open questions. Their acknowledged chief is the First Lord of the Treasury. When a Commoner, he frequently though not necessarily combines with that office the Chancellorship of the Exchequer; of late years, however, these two offices have been kept distinct; the last occasion on which they were united was in the year 1835.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—This branch of the Legislature used to sit in St. Stephen's Chapel until the year 1834, when that building was destroyed by fire. St. Stephen's Hall now occupies the site of the former House of Commons; the original basement story of St. Stephen's Chapel still exists in the ancient Crypt of St. Stephen's, which has been superbly embellished and restored for use as the Palace Chapel. The representatives of the people in Feb. 1852, first assembled in their present chamber, which is not far from the north end of the Palace. The "Strangers' gallery," and, below it, the "Speaker's gallery," are placed opposite the Speaker's chair, and command a full view of the House. Behind the chair is a gallery appropriated to the Reporters. The side galleries were intended to be strictly reserved for members, but during great debates, Peers are tacitly permitted to occupy the benches furthest removed from the Speaker. Persons usually obtain access to the Strangers' gallery through the written order of a Member. Admission to the Speaker's gallery is a more coveted privilege, and this is generally effected by a personal application on the part of some M.P. to the Serjeant-at-Arms. These two galleries for non-members are opened as soon as the Speaker takes the chair; but on Budget nights, and other interesting occasions, the candidates for admission to the Strangers' gallery range themselves in St. Stephen's Hall several hours before the doors are opened. The House used to adjourn to 10 o'clock in the morning, but the practice now is, that a few minutes before 4 o'clock the Speaker takes his seat at the table, and the Chaplain reads prayers. The Strangers', Speaker's, and Reporters' galleries are then opened, the Members present are counted, and, as forty generally attend, business begins.* If, after 4 o'clock, there are not forty Members present when the House is counted, the House is adjourned to the next day at the customary hour. The first half-hour is devoted to private business and petitions. At half-past four public business begins, when the leading Members of the Government are expected to be in their places to answer the questions of which notice has been given. On Wednesdays the House meets at noon and sits till 6, if the orders of the day are not sooner disposed of.

* Whenever the Commons are summoned by the Sovereign, or the royal commissioners to attend at the bar of the Lords, that per se constitutes a House whether forty members be present or not.

Towards the latter end of the Session, the House not unfrequently holds what are called "day sittings," in order to expedite the bills before it. On these occasions the Speaker takes the Chair at 12 o'clock: at 4 the sitting is suspended until 6, when business is resumed and the sitting is generally continued until after midnight. The House does not usually sit on Saturday. Peers and distinguished Foreigners are accommodated with seats below the bar. The Foreign Ministers usually sit in the gallery opposite the Speaker, which is also resorted to by Members of the other House of Parliament.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—The Strangers' gallery, as in the Commons, is not opened till after prayers. Their Lordships frequently sit during the day as a Court of Appeal, but do not usually assemble in their legislative capacity until five in the afternoon, unless upon the opening or closing of the session, which generally takes place at two o'clock; or when the royal assent is to be given to Bills by commission, on which occasion their Lordships meet earlier than the customary hour, but for this purpose no precise time has been established by usage. While sitting in their judicial capacity, the House, like other courts of justice, is open to the public.

INTERRUPTION OF THE SITTINGS OF PARLIAMENT.—The proceedings of the legislature may be interrupted or suspended either by adjournment, prorogation, or dissolution. Adjournment, as the term imports, is a postponement of the sitting or proceedings of either House of Parliament from one time, to another specified for the reassemblage. When the sittings of both Houses are interrupted by royal authority, it is called prorogation. Dissolution puts an end to the representative character of the individuals who at the time compose the House of Commons, as well as to that of the sixteen Scottish Peers, and Parliament cannot again assemble until after a general election. The power of adjournment is inherent in each House respectively, and no precise restraints upon this power are prescribed by the constitution. Either House may interrupt or postpone any debate, defer the consideration of any measure, or altogether adjourn its sittings. The Lords frequently adjourn "during pleasure," which means that the Lord Chancellor or other Speaker of the House may, in the exercise of his discretion, take his seat on the woolsack, two other Peers being present, and cause business to proceed at any hour within the day on which such adjournment "during pleasure" takes place, otherwise their Lordships' House will stand adjourned to the usual hour on the following day; but usage has fixed five o'clock, P.M., as the time for resuming after an adjournment "during pleasure." The Commons, on the contrary, always adjourn to a time specified. The adjournment of one House is no adjournment of the other. The Crown may, pending an adjournment or prorogation, summon both Houses by proclamation; and may direct them to adjourn to any particular day, which direction has always been obeyed to the letter; but some Members, and even some writers of authority, have denied the existence of such a prerogative, yet it has been frequently exercised, and never resisted. It is contrary, however, to modern usage. An individual member may for the time interrupt the progress of business, by successive motions of adjournment of the debate and adjournment of the House, which may be alternated indefinitely; but the adoption of this course rarely has the effect of delaying proceedings for more than a single day. In Committee, to move that the Chairman report progress is equivalent to moving that the debate be then adjourned. Adjournment does not close the session; prorogation does not terminate the Parliament; the former is an act of either House; the latter an act of the Crown, the duration of which may be extended or curtailed, according to the royal pleasure, subject to Act of Parliament. All unfinished proceedings (except an impeachment or proceedings before an election committee) are quashed by prorogation; but during an adjournment they remain in statu quo. A member who moves the adjournment of a debate is said to be in possession of the House, and is by courtesy entitled to speak first when the debate is resumed. But this rule does not apply to the renewal of debate in a Committee of the whole House; for such Committee cannot adjourn its sittings nor a debate to a future sitting. Prorogation never extends beyond eighty days, but fresh prorogations may take place from time to time by proclamation, and continue to be renewed till it is intended that Parliament should really assemble for the dispatch of business. The Crown, by proclamation, may, notwithstanding a prorogation, summon Parliament on giving fourteen days' notice. Dissolution is the civil death of the parliament, and may be effected by the pleasure of the Crown, by the demise of the Crown, or by length of time. The existence of a Parliament cannot be prolonged, even by the authority of the monarch, for a greater period than seven years, that period to be "accounted from the day in which by the writ of summons such Parliament is appointed to meet." Until the Reform Act of 1867 was passed, the law was that, however recently elected, a Parliament must expire in six months at most from the demise of the Crown; though, of course, it might be dissolved by the Sovereign in a less period than six months from the death of his predecessor. Since that Act became law, however, the Parliament in being at any future demise of the Crown will continue as long as it would have otherwise continued, unless dissolved by the new Sovereign. If Parliament at the time of the Sovereign's death be separated by adjournment or prorogation, it must assemble immediately. If no Parliament be then in existence, the members of the last must again meet and may serve as a Parliament for six months, unless sooner prorogued; and so much importance appears to be attached to an instant assemblage, that upon the demise of the Crown even the intervention of Sunday has not been permitted to delay the meeting of both Houses.

LORD HIGH CHANCELLOR.—This distinguished functionary being keeper of the great seal, is by prescription Speaker of the House of Lords, and is usually a Peer. When royal commissions are issued for opening the Session, for giving the royal assent to bills, or for proroguing Parliament, the Lord Chancellor is always one of the Commissioners, and reads the royal speech upon the occasion. When the Sovereign opens or closes the Session in person, the Lord Chancellor stands on the right of the throne, and hands to the Monarch the speech opening or terminating the annual labours of the Legislature.

NEWSPAPER REPORTING.—A century ago there was no publication which could properly be said to contain a satisfactory account of parliamentary proceedings, and even within the recollection of many persons now alive the debates were but very imperfectly reported. From the commencement of the first American war, however, till the year 1814, a gradual improvement took place in the publication of debates, until at length the art of the Reporter, and the business of the Publisher, were prosecuted with a degree of success, the effects of which will continue to be felt so long as freedom and civilisation exist in England. When the close of that war in 1815 diminished at once the supply and the importance of foreign intelligence; when the public attention became directed with almost exclusive anxiety to domestic affairs, the publication of Parliamentary debates appeared to become an object of national importance, and in the course of a few years assumed its present full, detailed, and accurate character. It is contrary to the standing orders of both Houses that any strangers should be present, and an individual member can demand that the order be enforced; the publication, therefore, of debates is held to be theoretically a breach of privilege; but in modern times, if any member were repeatedly to insist upon the exclusion of "strangers," as all are called who neither are members nor officers of the House, there can be no doubt that this abuse of the privilege must lead to such a modification of the standing order as would deprive individual members of any control over a matter so interesting to the nation, whose representatives and servants they are, from whose pleasure their Parliamentary existence and authority are derived, and by whom that authority would doubtless be speedily withdrawn, were any attempt made to carry on the business of the public without publicity. Secret deliberations have been so long renounced, that the right of the public to be present through their agents, the Reporters, is as clearly established now as if no theoretical privacy had ever existed.

ORDER.—By this word is meant an obedience to certain regulations which are intended to facilitate the dispatch of business, and preserve decorum in public deliberations. The rules by which the business of the Houses of Parliament is conducted are of two kinds, one class they possess in common with all public assemblies, another is peculiar to themselves (see Speaker, duties of, as also Order in the Lords). For the proper application of these rules, it has been found necessary that some officer should be appointed, to whose decision deference will be paid. Such an officer is the Chairman or Speaker. In the House of Commons (though the practice in the Lords is otherwise), he takes no part in debate, his duty being to regulate the manner in which business shall be transacted; to confine those who address the House to the real subject under discussion; to pronounce an opinion upon any thing relating to order; to put the matter in dispute into the form of a question, on which the votes of the body at large may be taken; to announce the decision of the majority; to declare the proceedings of the assembly closed at the completion of the business of the day, and to see that they are properly recorded. When the House sits in Committee, however, the Speaker may, in his capacity of Member of Parliament, take part in the debate. The first act of the Speaker on the House assembling is to intimate that business should commence, which is done by calling on the individual whose motion stands first on the list of notices, or who is otherwise entitled to precedence. By a standing order of 1866 Members may take the oath required by law at any time during the sitting of the House, before the orders of the day and notices of motions have been entered upon, or after they have been disposed of; but no debate or business is to be interrupted for that purpose. A motion being made, it is necessary that it should be seconded (except when the House is sitting in Committee), else it falls to the ground. This done, the terms of the motion are handed in writing to the Chairman, who reads them aloud. Objections may then be taken. Amongst the several modes of opposing a motion, are the following—a direct negative, an amendment, a postponement, proceeding to “the orders of the day.”

moving "the previous question," or an adjournment. A motion which has been moved, seconded, and read, becomes a sort of property of the whole body, and cannot be withdrawn without leave. If no objector to a motion present himself, neither the mover nor seconder has a right to speak again, except in explanation; but if an objection be started, a right of reply is, according to the courtesy of all assemblies, acquired by the mover of any original motion, but not by the mover of an amendment;—the privilege of explanation, however, is conceded to all. The debate being ended, either by a pause, or at the manifest wish of a large majority, the presiding Member puts the question, calling upon those who are favourable to say "ay," and those of a contrary opinion to say "no." He then declares, that in his judgment the "ayes" or the "noes" "have it." If any Member should question this decision, the House must divide, the Speaker or Chairman appointing tellers; in the House of Lords, the phrase is "content" and "not content," whilst in most other public assemblies the votes previous to a division are taken by show of hands. When an amendment has been moved, it is usual to take the votes simply for the amendment, and then for the original motion; but in Parliament the practice is that the Speaker or Chairman should read to the House the original motion, next that he should read the amendment, and then say, "the question which I am to put is, that the words proposed to be left out (by the amendment) stand part of the question." Should the "noes" prevail, the amendment then becomes a substantive motion, upon which other amendments may be moved, and considered in like manner as the first. Thus a number of successive amendments to the original motion may be disposed of, amendments can be moved upon an amendment; and all the amendments as well as the motion itself may be negatived. If a notice of motion be dropped, it may again be brought before the House on the next sitting day, when, if it contain no matter that is debatable, it will be taken first in order. Any Member is at liberty to interrupt another by "rising to order," viz., calling the attention of the chair, or of the assembly at large, to the fact, that a breach of order was then being committed. When two or more Members rise at once to address the House of Commons, the Speaker or Chairman signifies who shall have precedence; but the ultimate determination as to who is to speak lies with the House itself. Any Member having once spoken on a motion or amendment cannot again address the House on the same subject or the same stage of the proceedings, but in Committees of the whole House this rule does not prevail. In Parliament it is contrary to order for those engaged in debate, to mention any Member by name (excepting the Chairman of Committees). It is also out of order to speak in direct terms of any proceedings of the other House, unless they have been formally made known by "message," or recorded in the notices, votes, or orders of the other House. It is also irregular to refer to the opinions of the Sovereign; speeches from the throne and royal messages being treated as the sentiments of the ministry, which the Sovereign utters or communicates on their responsibility.

ORDER IN THE LORDS.—The rules of order in the House of Lords differ in some particulars from those observed in the Commons. In debate those who speak address the whole House, and not the chairman. A motion being made, need not here, as in the Commons, be seconded. The Peer who sits on the woolsack or in the chair of committees has no duties to perform during the deliberations of the House, excepting to "put the question." He is not the judge or guardian of order. If several Peers rise together, the House decides who shall first be heard. The speaker or deputy speaker of the Lords is not disqualified ex officio from taking a part in debate. Until the year 1868 the process of voting in the House of Lords differed from that in the House of Commons, inasmuch as absent Peers were allowed to vote by proxy. In April of that year, however, a new standing order was agreed to, by which is ordered "that the practice of calling for proxies be discontinued."

ORIGINATING BILLS.—With the Crown all bills of amnesty originate;—with the House of Lords all bills relating to a restitution in blood and to restitution of honours;—with the House of Commons all bills relating to the public income and expenditure, and all other measures that can properly come within the class of "money bills." Bills affecting the royal prerogative are not usually introduced into either House without the previous consent of the Crown. It is considered unconstitutional for one House to take the initiative in any measure affecting the privileges of the other. In general it is held that in the Lords should originate bills of "pains and penalties," or other measures founded upon oral testimony, as their Lordships, unlike the Commons, have the power of examining witnesses upon oath.

ORDERS OF THE DAY (PASSING TO THE).—See Avoidance of a Decision.

PARLIAMENT.—The Commons are not the Parliament, neither are the Lords nor the Crown; but the three united are the "Estates," which in their triple capacity constitute the Parliament, and exercise the legislative functions of the realm. A peer is of course as much a member of Parliament as a commoner, while the Crown is a whole estate of Parliament centred in the person of an individual. The two Houses convened by royal authority, and acting jointly with the Crown, constitute the Legislature or Parliament; and its acts are called indifferently "Statutes" or "Acts of Parliament;" they have the full force and effect of law. (See "Bills," as also "Estate of Parliament.") The power of Parliament is held to be tranascendent, and subject to no limitation whatever. An Act of Parliament binds every subject, and even the Sovereign, when specially named therein; and no authority less than that of Parliament can dispense with or abrogate a statute.

PEERS OF PARLIAMENT.—The Peerage of Great Britain and Ireland may be described as consisting of the following parts; the reader, however, should bear in mind that every individual peerage has a locality, no matter with what part of the empire the existing possessor may otherwise be connected. There are, in the first place, the Peers of England; 2ndly, those of Scotland; 3rdly, those of Ireland; 4thly, those of the United Kingdom; and, 5thly, those of the Episcopal Bench; but such distinctions are chiefly confined to Parliament. In the House of Lords, all Peers of England have seats and votes, so have all of the United Kingdom, though the locality may be Irish or Scottish. It frequently happens that Peers of England, or of the United Kingdom, hold an equal or superior rank in the peerage of Scotland or that of Ireland. In which case, though popularly known by the higher dignity, they still have seats and votes in the House as of the inferior rank. Lord Wentworth (by courtesy Viscount Ockham), son of the Earl of Lovelace, has a seat in the Upper House during his father's lifetime, having succeeded to a peerage through his mother. This title will become merged, on its possessor succeeding to the higher dignity. The peers of Scotland and Ireland have a place in the House only by their representatives, of which Ireland sends 28, and Scotland 16. By the Act of Union, no Irish Peer enjoying a British dignity can be elected a Representative Peer. But the case of an Irish Representative obtaining an English Peerage after his election was not adverted to: there have consequently been Irish representatives sitting by their Irish dignities, though holding also English baronies. Of the 25 English and Welsh Bishops, 24 sit as Barons, the junior member of the episcopal bench being excluded from the House of Lords. The Bishop of Sodor and Man is not a Lord of Parliament. The Scottish peers are chosen with every new Parliament. The twenty-eight Irish temporal peers are elected for life.

PETITIONS.—There are several regulations respecting petitions to Parliament, which, if neglected in any one particular, will prevent their reception. When intended for the House of Lords, a petition must be addressed, "To the Right Honourable the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in Parliament assembled;" when addressed to the House of Commons, it may be directed, "To the Honourable the Knights, Citizens, and Burgesses of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland in Parliament assembled;" but more usually in this form, "To the Honourable the Commons of the United Kingdom in Parliament assembled." Its commencement must describe the petitioners thus:

"The humble petition of the electors of the parish of — sheweth that," &c., or, in the case of an individual, his name and occupation must be stated thus: "The humble petition of John Brown, carpenter, sheweth that," &c. The statement of grievance must then follow; and the whole must conclude with a specific prayer. The omission of a prayer is fatal to the reception of a petition, for no mere remonstrance or detail of grievance will be received. The prayer should be thus introduced: "Wherefore your petitioners humbly pray that your Honourable House will be pleased to," &c., the particular relief expected being here stated. To the whole petition must be added the words, "And your petitioners as in duty bound will ever pray;" immediately thereupon must follow the signatures; of which one at least must be on the same sheet of paper, or skin of parchment, as the petition—not pasted or otherwise appended. The signatures or marks must be original—not copies nor signatures of agents on behalf of others; thus no chairman of a public meeting can sign for the whole meeting; by such an informality the petition becomes that of an individual. But the common seal of a Corporation is received as the petition of the whole corporate body. A printed or lithographed petition will not be received; it must be in writing on parchment or on paper, free from erasures or interlineations, and composed in English, or accompanied by a translation, which the presenting member certifies to be correct; but no letters, affidavits, or other documents, can be annexed. Petitions are uniformly rejected if not respectful and temperate in language, free from imputations upon the character and conduct of either House of Parliament, the Courts of Justice, or other constituted authorities. No reference is permitted to any debates, or to any motions supposed to be in preparation; while petitions, praying for a grant of public money or for the remission of customs, stamps, or other duties, (when payable by any person,) can only be received on the recommendation of the Crown. The presenting member is expected to examine whether these conditions have been complied with, and though no debate is allowed on a petition, the Committee on Public Petitions subsequently subject all those documents to a severe scrutiny. Petitions for presentation may be forwarded by post, free of charge, to any member of either House, in parcels open at the ends marked outside, "Parliamentary Petitions," and not exceeding 32 ounces in weight.

PRIVILEGES OF PARLIAMENT.—These are of three kinds: 1st, the privileges which appertain to members individually; 2nd, those which belong to either House in its collective capacity; 3rd, those of both Houses jointly.

From well known precedents it appears that the Lords and Commons, acting concurrently, can assume the supreme power whenever the throne is vacant, or the Sovereign incapable of exercising the royal functions, as happened at the Revolution in 1688; in 1788, when a regency was offered to the Prince of Wales, though George III. recovered so speedily that it became unnecessary; in 1812, when a restricted regency was appointed; and, subsequently, when the restrictions were removed. The separate privileges of either House are extensive, but they are, at the same time, uncertain and indefinite. Amongst those privileges are the power of committing individuals to prison, the power of publishing matters which, if not issuing from such high authority, might become the subject of proceedings in a court of law, the power of directing the Attorney-General to prosecute persons accused of offences against the laws, or affecting the privilege of Parliament, and, finally, a power vested in each House respectively of doing any thing not directly contravening an Act of Parliament—which may be necessary for the vindication or protection of itself in the exercise of its own constitutional functions. To these wide powers, however, there are some limitations, for instance, persons imprisoned for contempt cannot be liberated nor admitted to bail. In the daily proceedings of Parliament questions of privilege take precedence of all other business. The privileges of individual members of Parliament are freedom of speech and person, including freedom from legal arrests and seizures under process from the courts of law or equity; this, however, does not extend to indictable offences, to actual contempts of the courts of justice, or to cases made felonies and misdemeanors by the laws of bankruptcy. Members of Parliament are exempt from obeying subpoenas, and serving on juries. Every member can introduce one person to the strangers' gallery. "Privilege of Parliament" continues to Peers at all times, and to Commoners for a "convenient" time after prorogation and dissolution. Peers are entitled to be present at the coronation of the Sovereign, and if Parliament be in session at the time, the Commons also attend, with their clerks and officers. Peers cannot be outlawed in any civil action, nor can any attachment lie against their persons; they are exempt from attending courts leet, or the posse-comitatus; when arraigned for any criminal offence, it must be before their peers, who return a verdict, not upon oath, but upon honour; they have the privilege of sitting covered in courts of justice; they may vote in Parliament by proxy.

QUESTION.—See Order.

ROYAL ASSENT.—The act by which the Crown agrees to a bill which has already passed both Houses is called "The Royal Assent," which may be given by the Sovereign in person robed, crowned, and seated on the throne in the House of Lords, the Commons standing at the bar: or the royal assent may be given by commissioners appointed by the Crown for that special purpose and for the single occasion. The forms observed in both cases do not vary, and are as follow:—The Lords being assembled in their own House, the Sovereign or the Commissioners seated, and the Commons at the bar, the titles of the several bills which have passed both Houses are read, and the King or Queen's answer is declared by the clerk of the Parliaments in Norman French. To a bill of supply the assent is given in the following words:—“Le roy (or, la reine) remercie ses bons sujets, accepte leur bontévolence et ainsi le veult.” To a private bill it is thus declared:—“Sott fait comme il est destré.” And to public general bills it is given in these terms:—“Le roy (or, la reine) le veult.” Should the Sovereign refuse his assent, it is in the gentle language of “*Le roy (or, la reine) s'avisera .” As acts of grace and amnesty originate with the Crown, the clerk expressing the gratitude of the subject addresses the throne as follows:—“Les prélats, seigneurs, et communes, en ce présent Parliement assemblés au nom de tous vous autres sujets remercient très humblement vostre majesté, et prient à Dieu vous donner en santé bonne vie et longue.” The moment the royal assent has been given, that which was a bill becomes an Act, and instantly has the force and effect of law, unless some time for the commencement of its operation should have been specially appointed.

SERJEANT AT ARMS.—Of officers bearing this title, there are several; some are attached to the Court of Chancery; but there are two appointed by the Crown to attend the Houses of Parliament, and each has a deputy. In the House of Lords, the practical maintenance of decorum below the bar, near the throne, and in the gallery, devolves upon the gentleman and yeoman usher, with their assistants, so that “the Serjeant at Arms attending the House of Lords” has less conspicuous duties to perform than those which devolve upon “the Serjeant attending the House of Commons;” both, however, execute the commands of the House to which they belong, as regards the apprehension or custody of all persons committed by order of Parliament. In the House of Commons, the Serjeant at Arms is an officer of considerable importance, enjoying large emoluments, assisted by a deputy and several subordinate officers; during the sittings of the House he occupies a chair below the bar, and he directs a large proportion of the arrangements connected with the maintenance of order in the approaches to the House and the offices adjacent. He is at once the executive and the ceremonial officer of the lower House; but his discretionary powers are not extensive, for almost all his more important duties are performed under the immediate direction of the House itself, communicated through the Speaker. The office is usually held by a gentleman of the military profession, seldom under the rank of a field officer.

* Queen Elizabeth at the end of a Session rejected 48 bills agreed to by both Houses. The power of rejection was exercised for the last time in the year 1707 by Queen Anne who refused her assent to a bill for settling the militia in Scotland.

SESSION.—The term session, applied to the sittings of any public assembly, would be generally understood to signify the period during which they sat without any intermission or recess; but in Parliamentary language it has a more extensive signification. Unless Parliament be prorogued, the session is not closed. The House of Commons takes care to limit to one year the duration of certain acts of Parliament, such as the Mutiny Act, all statutes authorizing the levy of taxes, &c., without which the Government of the country could not be carried on, and the Crown, therefore, is compelled to resort to an annual assemblage of Parliament, which usually takes place in the beginning of February, though special circumstances may sometimes lead to the appointment of an earlier period. Fourteen days at least, but generally thirty or forty days previous to the intended meeting, a proclamation is issued by the Crown, commanding the attendance of the Lords and Commons, usually at Westminster; but it may be at any place within the United Kingdom. The Houses being assembled, the Sovereign meets them in the House of Lords, and delivers a speech. In this manner does a session commence. The circumstance of either or both Houses adjourning their sittings, whether with, or without the recommendation of the Crown, does not terminate the session. To effect that, there must be an actual prorogation under a royal commission, or by the Sovereign in person. The progress which a measure makes in one session, does not influence its position in the next, or in any other; for if not completed previous to the prorogation of Parliament, it must in any following session be commenced de novo. The mere assemblage and prorogation are not however sufficient of themselves to constitute a session, unless one bill, at least, have passed both Houses, and received the Royal assent. The business usually transacted on the first day of every session is to take into consideration the speech from the throne; but for "form sake," one bill always receives a first reading, in order, it is said, to assert a right in the Parliament of not being obliged to give precedence to the subjects contained in the royal speech. In the year 1763, in 1817, and on various other occasions, the consideration of the King's speech has been delayed by discussions on other subjects, but generally the practice is to proceed with it at five o'clock in the afternoon, namely, in about two hours after the speech has been delivered. The usual duration of the session is from February to August; but no number or length of adjournments destroys its continuity. In the year 1621, the House of Commons adjourned its sittings for five months; but yet it was held that the session had not terminated. (See Interruption of the Sittings of Parliament.)

SIX MONTHS (THIS DAY).—See Avoidance of a Decision.

SPEAKER OF THE HOUSE OF COMMONS (DUTIES OF).—This great officer must have been anciently as at present the organ or spokesman of the Commons, although in modern times he is more occupied in presiding over the deliberations of the House, than in delivering speeches on their behalf. Amongst the duties of the Speaker are the following;—To read to the Sovereign petitions or addresses from the Commons, and to deliver, in the Royal presence, whether at the Palace or in the House of Lords, such speeches as are usually made on behalf of the Commons; to manage in the name of the House, where counsel, witnesses, or prisoners, are at the bar; to reprimand persons who have incurred the displeasure of the House; to issue warrants of committal or release for breaches of privilege, to communicate in writing with any parties, when so instructed by the House; to exercise vigilance in reference to private bills, especially with a view to protect property in general, or the rights of individuals, from undue encroachment or injury; to express the thanks or approbation of the Commons to distinguished personages; to control and regulate the subordinate officers of the House; to entertain the members at dinner, in due succession, and at stated periods; to adjourn the House at four o'clock, if forty members be not present (see Adjournment); to appoint tellers on divisions. The Speaker must abstain from debating, unless in Committees of the whole House. As Chairman of the House, his duties are the same as those of any other President of a deliberative assembly. (See Order.) When Parliament is about to be prorogued, it is customary for the Speaker to address to the Sovereign, in the House of Lords, a speech, recapitulating the proceedings of the session.

SPEAKER—HIS PRIVILEGES, APPOINTMENT, AND RANK.—He is chosen by the House of Commons from amongst its own members, subject to the approval of the Crown, and holds his office till the dissolution of the Parliament in which he was elected. His salary is 5000*l.* a-year, exclusive of a furnished residence. At the end of his official labours he is generally rewarded by a peerage, and a pension of 4000*l.* for two lives. He is a member of the Privy Council, and entitled to rank after Barons. When forty members are not present, he may adjourn the House without leave. (See Adjournment.) Until the year 1853, business generally speaking could not be transacted in his absence, though to this rule there was an exception in the year 1606, a prisoner being released by order of the House during the illness of a Speaker. In August 1853, however, it was resolved that during the unavoidable absence of the Speaker, the Chairman of Committees of the whole House should preside in his stead. Should a member persevere in breaches of order, the Speaker may "name" him, as it is called, a course uniformly followed by the censure of the House. In extreme cases the Speaker may order members er others into custody until the pleasure of the House be signified. (See Committees.) On divisions, when the numbers happen to be equal, he gives the casting voice, but he never otherwise votes.

SPEAKER OF THE HOUSE OF LORDS.—The Lord Chancellor is the keeper of the great seal, and by virtue of that office he becomes on the bare delivery of the seal to him by the Sovereign, Speaker of the House of Lords. He is usually, but not necessarily a peer. There has always been a Deputy Speaker, and formerly there were two or more; but since the year 1851 there has been only one. The Chairman in Committees generally fills this office (see Chairman of Committees of Commons). In the absence of the Lord Chancellor and of the Deputy Speaker, it is competent to the House to appoint any noble Lord to take the woolsack. The Speaker is the organ or mouthpiece of the House, and it therefore is his duty to represent their Lordships in their collective capacity when holding intercourse with other public bodies or with individuals. He has not a casting vote upon divisions, for should the numbers prove equal, the not contents prevail. (See Speaker of the House of Commons, Duties of, Privileges of.) The Deputy Speaker of the Lords is appointed by the Crown. (See Order, as also Order in the Lords.)

STRANGERS (ADMISSION OF).—See House of Commons.

SUPPLY (COMMITTEE OF).—All proceedings which relate to the public income or expenditure, must originate with the House of Commons, and the initiative to the latter consists of resolutions moved in a Committee of Supply, which is always a Committee of the whole House. In the course of the session, estimates are submitted to a Committee of Supply, and resolutions moved therein, granting to the Crown the sums requisite for defraying the expense attendant upon the various branches of the public service. Those resolutions having been considered and disposed of, such amongst them as may be affirmed, are reported to the House, reconsidered, and adopted or rejected. Under authority of those to which the House agree, the Lords of the Treasury issue the requisite funds for carrying on the service of the country. At the end of the session, the supply resolutions are consolidated in the Appropriation Bill, which is sent up to the Lords, and being there considered and decided on, receives the Royal assent, and becomes law. The Lords may reject this or any other money bill; but it would be considered an invasion of the privileges of the Commons if their Lordships were substantially to modify measures of this class; the Commons, however, do not object to consider any verbal emendations which may be made by the other House. Before any bill can be introduced, authorising expenditure of public money, resolutions must be moved in Committee of Supply, agreed to there, reported, and confirmed by the House.

THREE MONTHS (THIS DAY).—See Avoidance of a Decision.<sup>1</sup>

VACATING SEATS.—See Chiltern Hundreds.

WAYS AND MEANS (COMMITTEE OF).—As the Committee of Supply (which see) relates to the expenditure of the nation, so the functions and duties of a Committee of Ways and Means, have reference to the funds by which such expenditure is to be sustained. Loans, duties, taxes, tolls, revenue and imposts of every description, are submitted to a Committee of Ways and Means (which is always one of the whole House). The propositions of Government on these subjects are reduced to the form of resolutions, considered, decided on; and such as are agreed to, reported to the House. Those which may be there adopted are embodied into bills, and in due course become law. As in the case of supply, the Lords may reject, but cannot modify; neither can their Lordships insert pecuniary penalties in any bill, unless it be a Private Bill.

PEERS WHO ARE MINORS.

The following is a list of noble lords not yet of age, with the date at which each will attain his majority. As these peers do not enjoy the right of sitting or voting in Parliament, they are not included in the general account of members of the Upper House.

PRINCIPAL CLUB-HOUSES.

Although associations of this nature are not immediately connected with the Legislature, yet the majority of both Houses are members of Clubs, and several of them give their addresses at those establishments; but, unlike hotels, Club-houses bear no inscriptions, and many who have heard the names of all, are yet ignorant of the locality of any; a list is, therefore, here subjoined, which it is expected will prove as useful to Members themselves as to every person connected with Parliament, or having intercourse with public men.

DOD'S PEERAGE, BARONETAGE, KNIGHTAGE, &c., for 1870.

*This differs from all other Peerages in—*I. Its low price. II. Its enlarged contents. III. Its facility of reference.

INSTEAD of noticing only Peers and Baronets, it contains also

- Bishops, English, Irish, Scottish, and Colonial,
- Knights of the Bath, Knights of St. Michael and St. George, Knights of the Star of India, Knights-Bachelor, &c.
- Baronets' Widows,
- Knights' Widows,
- Privy Councillors of Great Britain and of Ireland,
- Lords of Session in Scotland, &c.

INSTEAD of long antiquarian pedigrees, it describes Living Persons.

INSTEAD of a meagre date or two of birth or marriage, it gives a complete biography, including

- 1 Parentage and Descent,
- 2 Age and Place of Birth,
- 3 Marriage,
- 4 School and University,
- 5 Call to the Bar, or Ordination,
- 6 Successive Steps in Professional Life,
- 7 Public Services, Military, Naval, or Diplomatic,
- 8 Shrievalty, Deputy-Lieutenancy, Yeomanry, Militia, or Volunteer Rifle Appointments,
- 9 Patronage of Livings in the Church,
- 10 Works in Literature, Science, &c.
- 11 Residences, with their respective post-towns, and a variety of personal details.

INSTEAD of being confined to a mere account of Persons, living or dead, it includes likewise

- I. The fullest and most authentic Treatise on Precedence that has ever been published,
- II. An Original Article on the Inferior Titles of Living Peers, noticing the local designations, peculiar orthography, and numbers of the Peerage,
- III. Courtesy Titles and Second Marriages,
- IV. Second Titles of Peers who at present have no Male Issue,
- V. A Dictionary of Titular Distinctions, and of Terms relating to Ranks,
- VI. An Article on the formal Modes of addressing Letters to Persons of Title,
- VII. Lists of the Orders of Knighthood, giving the Date of each Knight's Election,
- VIII. Lists of the Privy Council of Great Britain and Ireland.

INSTEAD of the names being classed into a variety of ranks and subdivisions, these are all included within two personal Dictionaries, 1st. Comprising every Peer, Peeress, Bishop, Lord of Session, Baronet, Privy Councillor, Knight, &c.

2nd. Comprising every person who bears the courtesy title of Lord, Lady, or Honourable.

To all this are prefixed 26 Plates of the Coronets, Badges, Collars, Stars and Devices peculiar to each rank.

Handsomely bound in foolscap 8vo, Price 10s. 6d. cloth, gilt, and sold by all Booksellers in Town and Country.
